

Ideas for Jeopardy

1. If you are doing a study of suffixes and prefixes, place that suffix or prefix at the top of the board in the column label section. Under the words, put the definition of words that contain the suffix or prefix.
2. In a study of states and regions, or continents, label each column with a region or continent, then have the questions regarding those under the money values.
3. As a review of animal kingdoms, have each label with one of the kingdoms and questions regarding each under their appropriate label.
4. You could label each column with a Bible story and include questions regarding them under their appropriate labels.
5. You can make two copies of this board and cut the boxes out and tape them onto the other board as flaps so that the student can't see the question until they call out the column and value. "I'll take "What is a mammal?" for $500." They should answer the question as a question too. For instance, "What is a lion?" if lion happened to be the answer to the question you asked.

Hope there are some wonderful ideas that you come up in using this board. Have fun!
