Congratulations on your upcoming wedding, and if you're just starting your search for the perfect invitation, then I welcome you to the wonderful world of wedding invitations, save the dates, and paper details!

I was inspired to create the Wedding Invitation Ideas lookbook because, well, I love invitations, but also because I understand how challenging it can be to find the time during the wedding planning process to juggle all of the different things that you need to do, even if those things — like looking for pretty wedding invitations — can be a lot of fun.

The Wedding Invitation Ideas lookbook serves as a quick visual reference and resource for couples at any stage in their wedding invitation search, and I hope that it will become a helpful addition to your collection of wedding inspiration.

These past few months have been a wild and wonderful wedding invitation adventure for me, and I'm incredibly excited to share over 250 beautiful designs from some of the top wedding invitation designers around. Are you ready for your very own invitation adventure? I know you are!

When you're on the hunt for the perfect invitation, you can easily find yourself feeling overwhelmed by all of the possibilities available to you. This is why I get so excited when I come across an invitation line like Claremont Collection, a letterpress wedding invitation collection from Curious & Company, a full-service design studio with a particular penchant for identity, stationery, web design ... and, with the debut of Claremont Collection, weddings, too!

When Brooke Forry and her business partners, Terry Baker and Maggie Moore, formed Curious & Company, Brooke was thrilled to take the lead on their stationery pursuits. She quickly channeled her passion for all things stationery, particularly wedding invitations, into action, and the group began work on what would eventually become the Claremont Collection, named after Claremont Road, the street on which Brooke grew up and of which she still has many fond childhood memories.

of the early 20th century, and each design is presented on the collection's website in a very clear and straightforward way. Available paper colors, envelope and liner colors, and ink colors are shown beside every invitation, and you can easily download a PDF of the full invitation suite and a pricing grid for future reference, too.

Letterpress printing for Claremont Collection is by the amazingly talented Colleen Walsh of Cleanwash Letterpress, who prints all of the invitation suites, as well as invitation and ink swatch samples that can be ordered through the Claremont Collection website.

So, no worries and no feeling overwhelmed, because the ladies behind Claremont Collection have you covered! By presenting their growing collection, which will soon include additional invitation designs and save the dates, in a way that's detailed and informative without being overwhelming, they simplify the process of ordering custom letterpress wedding invitations and leave you to the fun part : deciding which design is the perfect one for your special day.

BROOKE'S TOP 10 TIPS FOR ORDERING LETTERPRESS WEDDING INVITATIONS

- 1} If you love letterpress but aren't sure you can afford it, consider a one color design instead of something with two or three colors. A one color design can be just as beautiful and you will still get the beautiful texture of letterpress.
- 2} Another way to cut costs is to have a response post card, which will save you money on both a response envelope AND postage!
- 3} Always order a few more invitation suites than you think you'll need. You never know when you might have to add more people to your guest list, or send out another invitation when one gets lost in the mail. It's also nice to be sure you have a few extra suites to keep as mementos for yourselves and your parents, and printing extras later is always much more costly than ordering them up front.
- 4} Letterpress is an art form. There is a lot of it out there in the world of weddings, but the quality of the printing often varies. Take a look at samples in person before committing – a little extra money sometimes means a much more high quality product and less headaches throughout the process.
- 5} Be sure to have a full invitation suite weighed at the post office before you purchase your postage. Remember that square invitations always require extra postage, regardless of the weight.
- 6} Think of your invitations as a beautiful keepsake from the day you'll begin your new life together; invest in something that you will be thrilled to look back on years from now, or have framed and on display in your home.
- 7} If you're hiring a calligrapher to address your invitations, be sure to check with them ahead of time to see how many extra envelopes they require to account for mistakes. You will want to order these from your designer up front, as reprinting extras later will always be more expensive. (And have your calligrapher address one or two extras for you with your own name and address, to keep and not mail!)
- 8} Ordering your invitations about 3.5-4 months before your wedding will ensure plenty of time for design revisions, printing, calligraphy/addressing, stuffing and mailing. It's best to mail your invitations 6-8 weeks before the big day.
- 9} If ordering items for the day of your wedding (or post-wedding) such as place cards, menus and thank you cards, it is often best to order at the same time as your invitations. This can cut down on additional set-up costs since all items will be able to be printed together.
- 10} Never be afraid to ask for something that you want. If you find an invitation design that you love but you don't see the ink color you'd like, or you were hoping for a square invitation instead of a rectangle, reach out to the designer and see if they can make some modifications just for you. Chances are, they'll be happy to!
