To whom it may concern:

It is a pleasure for me to recommend John Saintignon for your head basketball coaching position. I have known of and personally observed both his teaching and his outstanding motivational skills at his various levels of experience. I followed his successful coaching record at the high school level in Arizona, having conducted a basketball coaching clinic during his tenure there. Likewise, I observed his abilities at the college level at Oregon State under the same circumstances and, most recently, at the professional level in Mexico City.

He is a tireless and enthusiastic teacher, strong in both the offensive and defensive aspects of the game. Ten very successful years at the high school level led to his experience as assistant at Oregon State and, in this assignment, he proved to be an excellent recruiter, scout, and, most importantly, played a very positive role in player development. This is the area of strength in which I most closely observed him, as he was tireless in his efforts to acquire the knowledge that leads to success in the coaching profession. It's a game which is constantly adding strategies for success, and I commend him in his search for continued excellence.

In this most recent season he has taken a professional team of medium talent to a surprising playoff level, a credit to his coaching and motivational abilities.

On a personal level, John exudes integrity and personal warmth which positively interacts with players, fellow staff members, opposing coaches as well as administrative leadership. There is no doubt that John would be a definite asset to your organization.

I have spent forty six (46) years as a coach, consultant, and observer of this great game at every level from high school to the professional ranks. Until my semi-retirement, I spent twelve (12) years as defensive coordinator of the NBA Seattle Supersonics. My book and series of DVD's on the defensive aspects of the game have been widely distributed. I share this only to give credibility to my recommendation for John. He deserves the recommendation of "old hands" like myself, and I am pleased to be part of his support.

Should you have further questions concerning John please feel free to contact me at 425-453-8002 in Bellevue, Washington.

Wishing you continued and future success and thank you for your time and consideration regarding John.

Sincerely yours,

Bob Kloppenburg
