Dear _____:

[Insert full citation and description of the original work.]

The requested permission covers future revisions and editions of my dissertation and to the prospective publication of my dissertation as an electronic dissertation available through UMI, the Networked Digital Library of Theses and Dissertations, and The George Washington University. These rights will in no way limit republication of the material(s) in any other form by you or others authorized by you. Your signing will verify that you own [or your company owns] the copyright to the above material(s).

Sincerely,

[Your name and signature]

Enclosure

PERMISSION GRANTED FOR THE USE REQUESTED ABOVE:

[Type name of addressee below signature line]

Instructions for permission letters:

1. Be sure to include your return address, telephone and fax numbers, and date at the top of your letter.
2. Verify the exact name and address of the addressee. Call the person to verify copyright ownership.
3. Clearly state the name of your university and your dissertation's title.
4. Describe the proposed use of the copyrighted material. If necessary, attach a copy of the quotations, diagrams, pictures, and other materials. If the proposed use is extensive, describe it in broad terms. Eliminate any ambiguities and be sure that your request for permission covers the full scope of your needs.
5. The signature line at the bottom of the sample letter is appropriate when an individual grants the permission. However, when a company, such as a publishing house, is granting permission, use the below signature format:
