JUDGING

Costumes will be evaluated based on the following four criteria:

- Craftsmanship (25 points) The quality of construction, material choice, design, and fitting are all elements of craftsmanship. The costume should be well made. For example, messy seams would count against the costume. Complexity of construction will get attention, but remember that a simple thing done well can often be better than a complex thing done poorly.
- Functionality (25 points) The costume must be wearable! A costume can look great, but if it cannot be worn then it is not a costume. Can you walk without help from another person? Is it comfortable? Can you use the restroom? Does it fall apart after one night or is it durable?
- Originality (25 points) If your costume idea is original, then it should show originality through the innovative use of materials, original props, and design aesthetics.
- Presentation (25 points) Time to show off. The costume should look good, or more specifically look like what you are aiming for with the costume. You should be acting the part or character.
