GREETING CARD FORMAT

Greeting cards are diverse, versatile, and relatively easy to make. But before you begin customizing your own card, it is good to lay down some basic standard elements that are present in almost any greeting card.

1. Cover Page

The cover page of a greeting card can be likened to a book cover. It needs to be engaging and striking enough to command attention. Choosing the appropriate image will depend on the occasion and it's really up to you to decide what cover image will suit your greeting card. Just make sure to choose good quality images and graphics.

2. Exterior Text

The recipient of the greeting card would need to know the message you're trying to convey. The cover page of your card would be incomplete without some form of text. It's up to you to choose what words go on the front page of your greeting card. You can experiment with fonts, text sizes, and different styles that suit your needs or preferences.

3. Interior Message

The point of a greeting card is to convey a message. The inside of your card will contain your actual greeting; and you could opt to expound more or pick up where your exterior text left off. The best messages are those that are genuine, witty, and heartfelt.

4. Card Size

Greeting cards normally come in a standard size but there are some exceptions. However, if you are planning to send or mail the greeting card, a compact and transportable size is best. And if you do decide to customize your own card online, you can have it printed any way you want. Some prefer a full page letter-size card while others opt to downsize to half a page.

5. Borders, Accents, etc.

Although text and images are the main elements of a greeting card, you can plug in a few extra elements just to decorate it further. Add more symmetry by enclosing your text in borders. A symmetrical and balanced card looks more put together.
