

How to Create a Brochure in Adobe InDesign

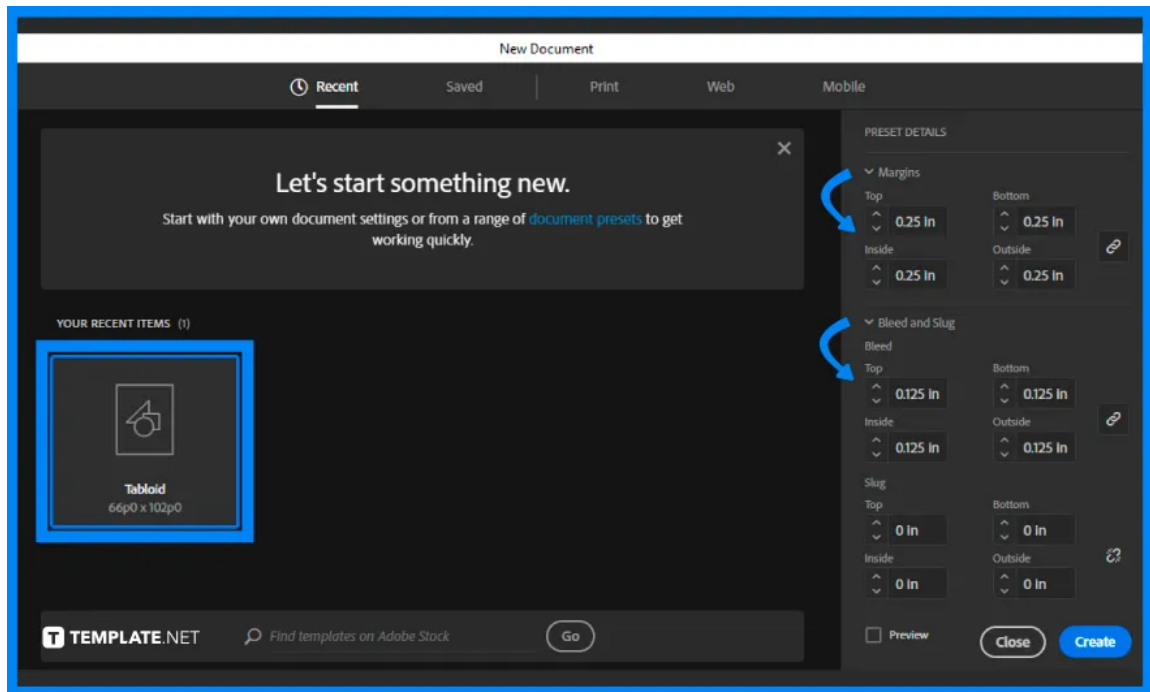

Adobe InDesign can help companies and organizations in creating brochures as a cost-efficient marketing strategy for their products and services while focusing on consistent branding to establish their identity as they reach out to their target customers. Read this post to learn the basics of creating a brochure in Adobe InDesign to help market and promote your products and services effectively.

How to Create a Brochure in Adobe InDesign

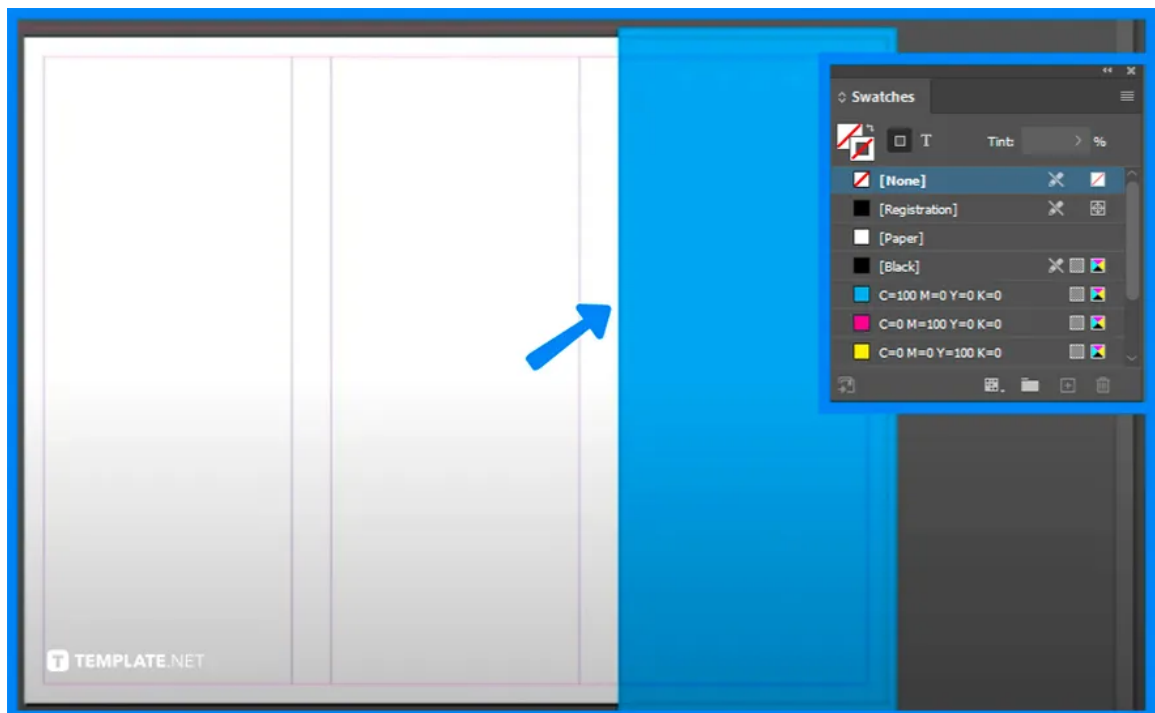

There are different types of brochures that a business firm or an organization or even a professional can use such as half-fold brochures, tri-fold brochures, z-fold brochures, open gate fold brochures, four-panel parallel fold brochures, and many others. Below are some basic steps you need to do when you create a simple brochure using Adobe InDesign.

- Step 1: Create a New Document

Go to Adobe InDesign. Then, create a new document for the brochure with margins of 0.25 inches and bleed margins of 0.125 inches.

- Step 2: Use the Rectangle Tool

Make a colored background or design for each column of your brochure. Use the Rectangle Tool to create a visual element for your brochure.

- Step 3: Use a Ready-made Brochure Template

If you want to work quickly, you can search for numerous brochure templates available online. After selecting your preferred template, download and open it to Adobe InDesign so that you can use it for your brochure.

- Step 4: Save and Export to Adobe PDF

Save your brochure design in InDesign. Adjust the Export Adobe PDF Settings according to your file usage and preferences such as in the Marks and Bleeds option.
