Tarpaulin Ideas FAQs

What can a tarpaulin be used for?

A tarpaulin can be used for different purposes, specifically for covering or protecting objects and for advertising, products, services, and events.

What is the origin of a tarpaulin?

Sailors often used tarred cloth or canvas palls to cover objects on ships; thus, the term tarpaulin originated from the combination of the words tar and palling.

Do tarps have grommets on all sides?

Grommets are placed on either side or along the edges of a tarpaulin, but not necessarily on all four corners.

What color of tarpaulin is the strongest?

Black, gray, and dark blue colored tarps are known to be some of the strongest, heaviest, and most durable of all the different kinds of tarps.

What is a good quality tarpaulin?

Tarpaulins with a composition made mostly of polyethylene are generally stronger, more durable, and have a higher waterproof ability compared to other materials such as canvas tarps.

How far apart are grommets on a tarpaulin?

Grommets can be spaced anywhere between 18 to 36 inches apart from each other.

What is the use of tarpaulin in business?

Tarpaulins make excellent and effective marketing material for promoting a business, event, service, or product.

What can you do with tarpaulin?

You can use it as a waterproof cover to protect objects from the elements, and you can also design and print a tarpaulin for marketing or promotional purposes.

What is tarpaulin advertising?

It is a type of advertising wherein the use of tarps is used to market a product, service, or event.

Why do tarpaulins have holes?

Holes are normally punched along the edges or sides of a tarpaulin for the grommets (metal rings) to be inserted so the tarp can be hung or put up for public display.
